

Aura Transformation Study Before & After The Light System Exposure

---

Date of Study: June 14, 2025
Location: Miami, Florida
Device: Aura Video Station 7
System: 32-Unit Light System
Session Duration: roughly 3 hours per participant
Sample Size: 16 individuals

Introduction

This study analyzes the before-and-after energetic profiles of 16 individual participants, each of whom spent roughly 3 hours in a controlled environment containing a 32-unit Light System. The system is designed to emit coherent fields believed to influence the human biofield. Using the Aura Video Station 7, each participant was scanned before and after exposure. The scans evaluated aura colors, chakra activity, energy distribution, and emotional indicators to determine whether exposure resulted in measurable shifts in energy or alignment.

Methodology

Participants were scanned using the Aura Video Station 7, a device that measures electrodermal activity through hand sensors to analyze aura color and chakra activity. The assessment includes aura color interpretation, chakra size, aura size, emotional and energetic metrics, and balance indicators. Each session includes a pre- and post-scan comparison to determine any shifts in energetic states.

Overall Observations

The data demonstrates a consistent pattern of positive energetic transformation following exposure to the Light System. Many individuals experienced a transition from more grounded or analytical aura colors toward those associated with emotional balance, spiritual growth, or intellectual clarity. Aura sizes generally increased or remained stable, while chakra activity showed improvement in alignment and energy flow.

Conclusion

This study suggests that short-term exposure to the Light System may enhance participants' energetic balance, emotional clarity, and overall vitality. Changes in aura color, chakra harmony, and relaxation indicators support the hypothesis that such technology can serve as a tool for holistic wellness.
